Dr John McKeon and Dr John Ryan will be attending EAACI Congress 2017 in Helsinki, Finland from 17-21 June 2017.

They look forward to meeting a number of key opinion leaders at the congress which will be highly relevant to the Allergy Standards mission and the asthma & allergy friendly certification program. The theme for the Helsinki Congress is “On the road to prevention and healthy living”. A unifying theme for EAACI, this represents the next step in making our patients’ lives healthy, despite their allergies. With more than half of all Europeans soon expected to suffer from allergy, ensuring our patients have a better quality of life, despite the allergy epidemic, is an obvious goal for EAACI, says Antti Lauerma, EAACI Congress 2017 Chair.

They will also be meeting with some clients while there and a number of potential companies as candidates for the certification program along with testing and inspection partners.

According to Antonella Muraro EAACI President Helsinki promises to be a wonderful Congress venue and offers an excellent opportunity for us to investigate, at close hand, the Finnish National Programme for Allergy – a programme which is becoming a model for other EU countries to follow.

About Allergy Standards

ASL is an International standards and certification body that prepares independent standards for a wide range of products to declare their suitability for people whose lives are affected by allergies and asthma. Asthma is a condition where the small tubes that carry air to the lungs (trachea) become inflamed and may become filled with mucus. This results in difficulty breathing. ASL has devised a series of proprietary testing protocols, performance criteria and suitability attributes for consumer products to be eligible for certification. These have been developed using internationally recognized trigger factor avoidance recommendations including allergens and irritants. The asthma & allergy friendly™ mark is applied to products that consumers can trust have been subject to rigorous independent testing to determine their suitability. ASL's management team possesses specialist skills in a variety of medical fields including asthma and other allergic diseases. For more information, visit www.allergystandards.com
